The Weekly Energy Map

Hi. This sheet is for drawing a picture of your week the way it actually feels — not the way a calendar app wishes it felt.

Most planners assume you arrive each morning with a full tank. Your energy doesn't work like that, and that's not a character flaw. Some mornings are bright. Some afternoons are fog. This map lets you sketch both in the same place, honestly.

1. Print this page plus the next one.
2. Once or twice a day, jot a word in the matching time slot: goal — what you intend to do, and real — what your energy actually did.
3. Circle nothing. Judge nothing. You're collecting a weather report, not grading yourself.

By Sunday you'll have a gentle, honest record of where your energy really lives in a week. That record is a map. The other six sheets in this pack are ways to travel by it.

Photocopy freely. No signups, no accounts, no branding — this is for your kitchen table, not a waiting room.

Weekly Energy Map

Week of _____ · Jot words in the boxes. One word is plenty.

1 · Nearly empty 2 · Low 3 · Middle 4 · Decent 5 · Good

DAY	MORNING	MIDDAY	AFTERNOON	EVENING
MONDAY
TUESDAY
WEDNESDAY
THURSDAY
FRIDAY
SATURDAY
SUNDAY

Optional shading: if a block felt like a level 1–5 day-part, softly shade its box with a matching pencil tone. The tints above are your key.

ONE THING THAT GAVE ENERGY	ONE THING THAT QUIETLY TOOK IT	ANYTHING THE WEATHER IS TELLING ME